

2) Family Circumstances/Parenting		Comments (include any mitigating/aggravating factors):
a) inadequate supervision	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	John resides with his mother in a one bedroom apartment. John's mother works full time as a waitress, primarily during the evening, which impacts her ability to provide supervision to John during those hours. John's mother is unaware of John's activities during these hours.
b) difficulty in controlling behavior	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	John's mother reports that she has been unable to control John's behaviour in the community in recent years. She was unable to identify any house rules for John and is concerned by her son's criminal activities; however, she still views her son as having many strengths. John views himself as loyal to his mother and is worried about the additional stresses that the police involvement place on her. In spite of this, John admits that he does not abide by her mother's requests because he considers himself independent and can make decisions for himself.
c) inappropriate discipline	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	John and his mother indicate that there are no consequences to his behaviour in the home. John's mother admits that she is overly permissive of John's negative behaviours.
d) inconsistent parenting	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	John and his mother admit that there are no clear or consistent rules in the home. John states that he will not abide by his mother's requests.
e) poor relationship/father-child	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	John's father has been absent since his birth and is not involved with the family. John has recently begun to discuss the impact this has had on his mother and their lives. John mentions having feelings of anger towards his father and is anxious about the financial stress his absence has caused for the family.
f) poor relationship/mother-child	<input type="checkbox"/>	John and his and mother indicate that they are loving and protective of each other. John's mother describes her son's strengths and expresses the desire to support him. John's mother admits that in the past she has not parented her son in a manner that has helped to reduce his antisocial behaviours in the community. She would like to improve her parenting skills to support John.
